Sample Living Will Form

Also available in PDF | MS Word

Each of the fifty states have some law regarding the ability of patients to make decisions about their medical care before the need fortreatment arises through the use of advance directives. The great majority of states allow for patients to draft living wills that set forth the type and duration of medical care that they wish to receive should they become unable tocommunicate those wishes on their own.

Although the law in each state will vary as to what can beincluded in a living will, the following sample can provide a general overviewof what one may look like, and what information may be included. Of course, before assuming that this sample will besufficient for your purposes, you should check the law in your jurisdiction orhave an attorney review your advance directives. In some states, however, an unapproved document may have some persuasive effect.

NOTES ABOUT LIVING WILL DECLARATION FORM:

- Paragraphs one and two can be tailored to suit yourown desires. For example, you could redraft paragraph one to state that youwould like to have life-sustaining treatments for "x" number of days or weeksand then if no progress is made and there is no reasonable hope of recovery, you would like to have the life-sustaining treatments withdrawn. As forparagraph two, if you do not wish to receive pain medications you can statethose wishes there.
- Paragraph three of the Declaration allows you to listall specific types of treatment you wish not to receive. If you do not havestrong feelings about any particular types of treatment, you do not need toinclude this paragraph in your own living will. However, if you do have strongpreferences, this is the place to list them.

Examples: Antibiotics, artificial feedings, hydration and fluids, blood transfusions, cardiac resuscitation, dialysis, intravenous lines, invasive tests, respiratorytherapy, mechanical respiratory assistance, and surgery.

Note: For manypeople, taking away food and water from a dying person seems especially cruelbecause they may feel as though the person is starving or dehydrating to death. However, you have a right to make your specific wishes known on the subject. It is advisable, however, to be particularly clear on those issues so that there is no room for your loved ones to debate. In addition, they will likely feelless burdened by guilt if they are certain they are following your specificwishes not to be artificially fed or hydrated.

- Paragraph four is the converse of paragraph three and allows you to clearly state what care and treatment you would like to receive. In addition, if you have specific instructions for other types of care, you may wish to include them in this paragraph.
 - Examples: At-home orhospice care as the end approaches, feelings about religious practices orcustoms at a terminal stage (for instance, if you wish for a certain clergymember to be called and be present).
- Paragraph six allows you to essentially "change" yourwishes should you also have another medical condition when you becomeincapacitated or incompetent.
 - Example: For womenof child-bearing age, the desire to forego life-sustaining treatment may becompromised if they are pregnant. In those situations, they may wish to be keptalive, if possible, until the baby can be safely delivered at which point, ifthere has been no recovery or reasonable progress, they may wish to then have their life-sustaining treatments withdrawn.
